Circular economy innovation:
CEIC's role in transforming Welsh organisations

Overview

The Circular Economy Innovation Communities (CEIC) programme, is a partnership between Cardiff Metropolitan University and Swansea University, funded by the European Social Fund (ESF) and the UK Government's Shared Prosperity Fund.

CEIC aims to help public, private and third sector organisations co-create innovative service solutions that contribute to Wales' Net Zero goals. The programme works closely with Welsh Government, Cardiff Capital Region, Swansea Bay Region, Net Zero Industry Wales and other key stakeholders.

Key impacts and successes:

- Created 22 new service solutions that reduced carbon footprints across participant organisations.
- Established 14 inter-organisational Communities of Practice (CoPs) across South Wales, enhancing collaboration and innovation.
- CEIC has supported 196 organisations and 314 participants in driving sustainable change through Circular Economy principles.
- The societal impact of CEIC was a contributing factor in Cardiff Metropolitan University being named the best university in Wales for sustainability in the People & Planet University League 2023/24.
- Highly commended as an Innovation Thought Leader in the Innovation Awards 2024.

The benefits of CEIC for organisations

In the face of an environmental crisis, adapting how we live and work is essential. By incorporating Circular Economy principles into an organisation's operations, resources can be maximised—used, reused, and repurposed for as long as possible.

Every organisational decision has both immediate environmental effects and long-term consequences. Adopting the Circular Economy model encourages thoughtful resource management, enabling the delivery of services in a more cost-effective, efficient, and sustainable manner.

- Driving Circular Economy Innovation

CEIC empowers organisations to adopt Circular Economy principles, focusing on resource efficiency, collaboration, and environmental leadership. The fully funded programme provides tools and expertise to help organisations reduce waste, improve operational efficiency, and enhance service delivery, all while working toward sustainability goals.

- Collaborative networks

Through CEIC's 22 CoPs across the Cardiff Capital Region and Swansea Bay, participants share ideas, develop new knowledge, and co-create solutions that meet both their operational needs and the demands of the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015.

- Sustainable leadership and impact

By integrating Circular Economy models into daily operations, participants have become sustainability leaders in their sectors. The programme fosters long-term thinking and ensures compliance with future-oriented policies, leaving a lasting positive impact on Wales.

Participant reflections

Welsh Water's Faye Ward highlighted the value of CEIC's collaborative approach: "The tools prompt us to discuss things relevant to the stage we're at. They've forced us to question and really test our thinking!"

"The benefits of being part of a CoP is that it's good to cross-pollinate and understand what other people are doing – and understand how we can work together to achieve future benefits for generations to come."
